KATE ROBICHAUD

Director, Beautycounter

Kate Robichaud is a Mom of 2, a Realtor in Oakville/Burlington and a Director with Beautycounter. After struggling with her own health after the birth of her second child, Kate became passionate about educating families on the lack of regulation in the beauty industry, the harmful ingredients that are on the shelves right now and the health risks associated with them.

Kate joined Beautycounter's mission of getting safer products into the hands of everyone when she realized she could make a significant impact on people's lives by educating and empowering families to make safer choices. We are exposed to so many chemicals and toxins on a daily basis that we have no control over. Choosing safer skin care products is something we can control and is a simple switch that will make a difference in the health of every family.
